Continuation of 3. NOTE: Claims 70-72 and 77-88 have been amended. The added limitations of the amended claims raise new issues and would require further search.

Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Regarding claim 69, the applicant argues on pages 13-14, that the HOTLIST in Bateman does not include public directory data, but rather maintains a list of customers whose queries need to be answered. Moreover, there is no indication in Bateman that the outbound dialing system utilizes an Internet messaging network to access the HOTLIST. Examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. It is because, in col.6, lines 32-35, Bateman teaches, telephone number, url are passed to dialing system 32 in Fig.1 via data net 44 [i.e., Internet messaging network]. It clearly means that an Internet messaging network is utilized to access the HOTLIST.

Regarding claim 73, the applicant argues on pages 16-17, that Bateman does not teach a customer selecting an agent. Examiner respectfully disagrees because the argument is not directed towards the claims. The claim does not recite "a customer selecting". It only recites 'selecting a B party'. Furthermore, the claims do not recite a particular B party or an actual party. Bateman teaches a customer which selects a help option (agent).

Regarding claims 40, 90, the applicant further argues on page 19-20, that in Sussman, in response to each user's search query, the service provider's central directory is not accessed. Examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. In col.5, lines 48-52, Sussman teaches the limitation.

The applicant further argues on pages 21-22, that there is no reason to combine Padden with Cohn in order to arrive at the claimed subject matter. Examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. In col.9, lines 55-57, Padden provides the suggestion that numerous other arrangements may be devised by one skilled in the art without departing from the spirit and scope of the invention.

Regarding claim 50, the applicant further argues on page 23, that there is no indication in Padden that the user's calling terminal includes a display that could be utilized to display a B party to the user (e.g., the name of a party whose directory listing the user desires). Examiner respectfully disagrees with this argument. The applicant didn't claim "name of a party whose directory listing the user desires". However, in col.5, lines 15-18, Padden teaches that display information that include the desired directory number.
